

Shelby Hosts Open House at New World Headquarters

To celebrate the opening of its new World Head Quarters, Shelby Systems, Inc., hosted an open house on September 18, 2008 for over 175 guests. Employees, business partners and family members alike enjoyed a fabulous evening of art, architecture and conversation.

Visitors were amazed by the contemporary architecture, lighting and art work. "I was impressed," said Rick Bartemus, Assistant Director at the Memphis Brooks Museum of Art. "They did a great job."

The overall décor of the building, including original works of contemporary art, was designed specifically for the space by Diane Martin, owner of Diane Martin Interiors. "She did a wonderful job decorating the new building," said Russell McDaniel, Chief Financial Officer at Shelby Systems. "The building itself is beautiful and she pulled it all together."

Guests enjoyed a tour of the building given by Shelby Systems employees, and mingled over scrumptious treats in the high-tech break room. "I really liked the openness; the tall ceiling, wide halls and spacious office areas," said Roger Polak of R&S Consulting. "When you arrive at the modern reception area, you also see some of the original computers used by the company. That gives you a look at the computer past within a modern facility." The new building is a testament to Shelby Systems' planning for the future.

Shelby Systems, located in Cordova, Tennessee, provides management software designed for faith-based organizations such as churches, denominational headquarters, and other non-profit groups. An innovator in the field of church management software since the 1970s, Shelby Systems continues to lead the industry with the creation of the new web products, Arena and Aspire.
